IS HAWAII RULED BY AMERICANS OR JAPANESE?

Is Hawaii ruled by Americans or Japanese? This is the question which has been asked by the officials of the law in Hawaii since the first of July. The question is not a new one. It has been asked many times before. It is asked again today because of the recent events which have transpired in Honolulu.

There is a possibility that it is ruled by Americans. That is what the officials of the law in Hawaii would say if it were not for the fact that the Japanese have taken possession of the land and established an independent government in the Japanese. It has been known for some time that the Japanese have been in possession of the land since the first of July.

All indications point to the conclusion of the Japanese. Judge Robinson's ruling is very similar to that for which Judge Tait, now President, sent out his labor leaders to prison for six months. It is a ruling which is a violation of the law and a violation of the rights of the citizens of this Territory.

What are we to do? The respect for our law when forty-eight hours after the recent law a protesting order, it is hereby and openly violated. What must we think of the freedom of the people to do as they please, to work or not to work, to make their homes in Honolulu or in the country, when we find that within this city is a violation of the law which is a violation of the rights of the people to be in and out, and if "passed" are withheld these people cannot go; should they be in a restaurant they are not free.

What do you think of that? You people who make yourselves think that the law is a mere thing, a mere job and the benefit of the agents all right so it does not touch white

JOLLY TARS VS. SUNDAY CLOSING

There was trouble yesterday on board the German steamship Flora, which is docking at the 19th Street wharf. Captain Kretz of the Flora and his men being a fight which resulted in the arrest of Schulz, one of the seamen.

It happened that Schulz and his men, after they had done their work last Saturday night, came ashore and celebrated by "boozing." Yesterday Schulz, who was still under the influence of liquor, returned to his ship and started to fight the crew. As the captain was not on board the ship, this morning, no definite information could be obtained from him.

First Officer Beck, when seen this morning, stated that Schulz and others had been drinking liquor yesterday. When they returned they started to fight Captain Kretz. Their attempt, however, was cut short when the police arrived and intervened.

"We had some fun on board the steamer here yesterday," said Beck. "Some of the sailors went ashore on Sunday and got off. When they returned Schulz commenced to make trouble with Captain Kretz. Of course the officers came to the assistance of the captain.

What sort of a nest of kindly disposed people is the city of Honolulu? It is a nest of kindly disposed people when the mandate of the court of justice makes no more impression on them than to sign them to do the same thing over again? If the course that these enemies of the public good are pursuing in the city of Honolulu, it is the most unkindly disposed to everything the court has ever said.

Why, the police forces of the city of Honolulu are mere children floating around at play on the outside, when compared with the vigilantes, the guards and the spies that issue the orders and do the work of the Japanese laborers. In the city, tell them when they may go, command when they shall return, and if the orders are not followed to the letter, the penalty of physical violence is in waiting to punish the spirit of the outrageous and blind terror to the soul of the land.

Mostly Maggishian in his political views, but little, if anything, that was superior in lawlessness in this. The Italian "black hand" is less dangerous to society because it is less perfectly organized. Shake the purposes of the whole outfit together and you couldn't tell the difference to your life.

What shall we do about it? That is first, of course, for the court to say, after all the facts are established by competent witnesses. With the average citizen, however, the courts of the last three years are such as to convince him that only a little more violation of law, a little more lawlessness, a little more independence of the residents of this city, a little more military organization of laborers to enforce the mandates of alloted Agitation, only a little more of what has gone before would be needed to make Honolulu a city of lawlessness.

Is American law to prevail in this Territory or is there to be one law for the American and another law for the Japanese laborer administered by self-appointed Japanese officers?

That's what Hawaii has to decide, today, Scholz, Kretz and Park. Justice is on hand, the Flora is here, and the law is on the police station. Their cases will probably be tried tomorrow before Judge Andrade.

MARITAL WISDOM SCORES FOR COURT

A friendly argument regarding the maintenance of a woman, who is as compared with a bachelor was held this morning in Judge Robinson's court between the Judge and A. L. K. Robinson. Robinson was defending William Parkin in the divorce suit brought against him by his wife, Ellen M. Parkin, and being a highly respected and interesting on the subject of domestic maintenance.

The argument developed from the fact that Parkin, and Mr. Robinson, who is the attorney, stated that they would like to see a law which would give a woman who is married, and the lawyer rush from her home in such matters.

The judge's wisdom on the matter finally prevailed, and the woman was granted $40 a month alimony during the continuance of the trial and at her own expense.

CUPID HAD NOW BETTER HUSTLE

Whatever the cupid might say of marriage, it will be a most happy event for Livia Malakina and Milla Poulina if by tomorrow morning they find themselves in the happy bonds of wedlock. They were found guilty some time ago under the Edmunds act, but as the woman was then said to have been seeking a divorce from her husband in order to marry Poulina, the court waived sentence and today, when he would inquire into the new marital arrangements in the county, both failed to put in an appearance. This morning when their case was called in the Federal Court and bench warrants were issued for them to show themselves in court tomorrow. Attorney Spencer, who represents them, said that he thought the two were safe, and that the divorce previously obtained had not been nullified in the event of their marriage. Nothing will disturb their bliss, he says, if they are married and they will get quickly settled.

MARINES MAKE GOOD SHOWING

Under the eagle eye of Major Leung, commander of Camp Verry, the United States Marines were subjected to military inspection this morning at Alala, near Kakaako. The boys, neatly attired in their khaki uniforms, made a splendid and exciting march, as they passed in front of their commander, who stood at attention.

Captain Lee of Company B, 2nd U.S. Marine Regiment, did not take part in the maneuvering of the battalion. The Hawaiian band, under the leadership of Captain Berger, played for the march, as they executed the military orders, given by Acting Major, Captain Lee.

Co. B, in command of a lieutenant, marched out from the camp. They were followed by Co. C, in command of Captain Campbell, Captain Ramsey commanded Co. D.

Owing to the absence of Co. A, which is in camp at Fort Shafter, the men did not turn out in the inspection this morning. The company is in command of Captain H. C. Snyder, and Lieutenant Underwood, Kilgore and Shearer. During their absence from Honolulu the men will be given strict training at the Fort Shafter rifle range. They will be there a month, after which they will return to town, to be relieved by Co. B. Companies C and D will also go out to Fort Shafter after a while.

The quarterly inspection was witnessed by a large crowd, composed principally of ladies and Orientals.

A NEW THEME OF PHILOSOPHY

The people of Honolulu were for the third time, Saturday night, treated to an excellent and scholarly address by Dr. Thomas E. Green on "The Gospel of Discontentment" at the Opera House, and the lecture proved to be a fascinating combination of the natural, scientific, moral, religious and weird, which unwound strong lessons of life before an interested audience. Among other things Dr. Green said were the following:

"You have been taught, since first you began your individual training, that contentment is one of the greatest virtues that mankind can possess. It is a slap in the face of conventional, of accepted philosophy, when I preach to you the doctrine of discontentment as the means of accomplishing things.

"It was not so long ago that man had to be contented whether he would or no. Man's sphere was narrow; he, of necessity, had to be satisfied with his surroundings.

"To the early man it was impossible to imagine anything that did not correspond to something he was acquainted with. The mountain had its music, plains whose rough games caused the thunder which disturbed his slumbers. Even the gods of the early man were simply magnified creatures, possessing all of the particular virtues and his shortcomings. The god of the early man was a magnified human. Every phenomenon was the work of some god, built in human image.

"An early man was possessed of fever. To him it was but the work of scores of devils, dashing through his body and taking delight in picking and prodding him with their fiery darts. Man could do nothing but bow in contentment to his fate and make the best of it.

"The wonder is that, in his struggle for existence, the primitive man ever found time to begin the study of contentment. It was only discontent which prompted him. Do you realize what he had to overcome?

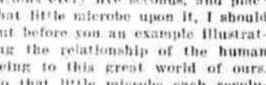

"Modern science has devised instruments so delicate that a microbe one hundred and fifty thousandths of an inch can be detected. Were I to take a wheel, six feet in diameter, and spin it going at the rate of 365 revolutions every five seconds, and place that little microbe upon it, I should put before you an example illustrating the relationship of the human being to this great world of ours. To that little microbe each revolution would be equivalent to one day. Five seconds would to that microbe represent one year of life. Four minutes would be equivalent to man's four score years and ten. What chance would that little microbe have to study the reason of it all?

"The old Greeks had a legend that the first discovery of man was fire. If that be true, he must have discovered it on some magic island like yours in the south, where a great volcanic

MR. GOVERNOR MUST EXPLAIN

There was a very narrow escape from serious accident at the Paopao landing last week whilst the steamer Mani was discharging her freight there.

All the cargo is gotten out of the steamer by wire cable which stretches from the cliff to the steamer. It appears that a sling in which Pursor Kent and the mail was sent up, arrived safely, but the next sling, which had general freight in it, had hardly got half way when the cable parted and the sling and its contents were dashed into the sea.

The cable sprang back like a catapult, and the freight disappeared in a flash of foam. Pursor Kent considers himself a very lucky man that he went up the three hundred feet in the first sling and thus missed death by a minute or two.
